Freedom vs. Forced Conformity

By Sartre

According to establishment officials, the concept of the Sovereign Man philosophy is a direct threat to the authority of the State. Depending upon your perception of reality and the degree of legitimacy the government has in the prevailing order, fundamental inalienable rights of the individual may vary widely. In the extreme, government statists consider most if not all natural rights as capricious and arbitrary, if conflicts challenge the dictates of the regime. This unending and interminable struggle to defend undeniable individual basic rights drives bureaucrats to use unconscionable measures to coerce citizen compliance.

An illustration comes from the FBI's Counterterrorism Analysis Section in their publication, Sovereign Citizens - A Growing Domestic Threat to Law Enforcement: "The FBI considers sovereign citizen extremists as comprising a domestic terrorist movement, which, scattered across the United States, has existed for decades . . . Sovereign citizens do not represent an anarchist group, nor are they a militia, although they sometimes use or buy illegal weapons. Rather, they operate as individuals without established leadership and only come together in loosely affiliated groups to train, help each other with paperwork, or socialize and talk about their ideology.

"They may refer to themselves as 'constitutionalists' or 'freemen,' which is not necessarily a connection to a specific group, but, rather, an indication that they are free from government control. They follow their own set of laws. While the philosophies and conspiracy theories can vary from person to person, their core beliefs are the same: The government operates outside of its jurisdiction. Because of this belief, they do not recognize federal, state, or local laws, policies, or regulations."

Such sentiments demonstrate that civil liberties have no place in the realm of federal law enforcement. Authoritarians assume that government automatically possesses authenticity because it claims to hold a monopoly of force within the society. Rational and balanced observers of the history of government abuses, especially to its own citizens, must conclude that arrogant superiority, manifested by magistrates and constables, has caused untold atrocities and suffering.

Resistance to unchecked governance through punitive social control and mind manipulation is the theme of arguably the most significant television series ever filmed, The Prisoner. The episodes of this 1960s British cult production are not simply offbeat entertainment, for it deals with some of the most pronounced maltreatments and psychological torture in a society of distorted reality.

For those not familiar with the program, Patrick McGoohan plays a man who resigns from a top secret position and is abducted from his London home. He finds himself in a beautiful village where everything is bright and cheerful — the people, their clothes, the buildings, the flowers. But despite this rosy exterior, the village serves a sinister purpose. People are forcibly brought there in order to have their valuable knowledge protected or extracted. Everyone in the Village is assigned a number instead of a name — the Prisoner is Number Six. The hief interrogator and administrator is Number Two, but he isn't the boss — an unseen Number One is the boss.

Failure is not tolerated in the Village, and most episodes feature a new Number Two, though some are privileged to return for a second chance to break Number Six and discover why he resigned.

The Spirit of America is incompatible with Big Goverment

The Prisoner struggles to keep this information from his captors and to find out which side runs the Village and where it is. He strives to discover the identity of Number One, and above all, he attempts to escape.

The global culture has changed in the forty-five years since No. 6 engaged in his existential struggle to preserve his dignity as a Sovereign Man. By any objective standard the attitudes and conditions in the world toward respecting the self-worth of the individual have descended into a new Dark Age of totalitarian despotism.

The always thoughtful and often profound John W. Whitehead of The Rutherford Institute penned an exceptional essay, "The Prisoner: 'I Am Not a Number. I Am a Free Man!'" An excerpt:

"Fundamentally, however, The Prisoner is an epistemological exercise that focuses on the concept of reality, both in the subjective and objective sense – that is, can we really know anything about anything? Is reality a mere social construct? Since society creates any knowledge that people may possess, does this mean that human beings are simply products of the given social setting from which they are manufactured? As Steven Paul Davies notes in The Prisoner Handbook (2002): 'Thinking for yourself is not necessarily thinking by yourself.' And as Number 2 warns Number 6 in the episode entitled 'Once upon a Time': 'Society is the place where people exist together. That is civilization. The lone wolf belongs to the wilderness. You must not grow up to be a lone wolf.'

"Therefore, the ultimate goal of those in power is conformity to the constructs of society. This means both figuratively and literally eliminating the lone wolf, the individual. Modern psychiatry defines 'normality' as conformity. This 'measuring of the human psyche by psychologists,' as Davies puts it, has seriously affected how we live our lives and how we view non-conformists. Media representations of 'normality' have become the criteria that society uses to evaluate its members. The concept of normality has become subjective as our views have changed to meet societal demands. The individual, as the term was once defined, is becoming passé. As McGoohan commented in 1968: 'At this moment individuals are being drained of their personalities and being brainwashed into slaves. The inquisition of the mind by psychiatrists is far worse than the assault on the body by torturers'."

The context of comparing and contrasting society and the individual has lost much of its academic substance. The "concept of reality" is routinely scripted by the elitist system that operates as the all-pervasive and all-powerful Number One. The Village of pleasant and polite appearance is essentially a penitentiary of human bondage and servitude. Heed the lesson that conformity under a coercive courtesan court is doomed to strip the majesty of their human spirit and substitute a remorseful sense of ruin, for the zombies that swallow the anguish of state discipline.

The relevance of the plight of The Prisoner holds true for all of humanity. In a video clip from the broadcast, The Prisoner - Which Side Runs the Village?, the purpose – "an international community, a perfect blueprint for world order," is the essence of the gruesome quandary that faces every living person in this age of the macabre New World Order.

The Sovereign Man is the natural order of the created universe. The Illuminati plan for total dominance seeks to eliminate individuals by "Men by their constitutions are naturally divided into two parties: 1. Those who fear and distrust the people, and wish to draw all powers from them into the hands of the higher classes; 2. Those who identify themselves with the people, have confidence in them, cherish and consider them as the most honest and safe, although not the most wise depository of the public interests.

"In every country these two parties exist, and in every one where they are free to think, speak, or write, they will declare themselves."
- Thomas Jefferson

the billions. Replacing the noncompliant is essential to their annihilating agenda. The selected and remaining few will adopt the technocratic transhumanist transformation into a demented version of Nietzsche's Gnostic Superman.

Bureaucratic minions administer punitive retribution with a sense of urgency, since the Patriot Acts allows for unmerciful treatment of "domestic terrorists." So says the FBI. The fear that grips the establishment rests upon the public awareness that "the government operates outside of its jurisdiction," also stated by the G-men. However, the recent reinstatement of the unconstitutional NDAA dictum should alarm all men of good will.

"This pernicious law poses one of the greatest threats to civil liberties in our nation's history," writes Brian J. Trautman. Under AUMF, "this law can be used by authorities to detain (forever) anyone the government considers a threat to national security and stability – potentially even demonstrators and protesters exercising their First Amendment rights."

If this is the real world, the Village of tranquil incarceration seems tame by comparison. The Prisoner program concludes in its search to unmask Number One, with the music of the Beatles — "All You Need Is Love" — playing in the background. Such hallowed harmony falls upon deaf ears, when it comes to the overseers of the global gulag.

Sovereign individuality is basically the noble quest to fulfill your life as a unique and sacred human being. Superseding natural law with wicked Transhumanism rejects God as our creator and master. Personal responsibility and respect for a moral and lawful order is consistent with an accountable and meaningful life.

Subjecting the masses to a techno-maniacal imprisonment destiny is pure evil. That "perfect blueprint for world order" is a master plan for total enslavement. Dissent against such illicit sanctions is necessary to prevent the threat of human extermination by the functionaries of the NWO.

No law is valid without the consent of the people. Logic dictates that slavery by forced conduct and mental conformity, through cultural perversion, is a behavioral assault on human dignity. The Sovereign Man is effectively the conscience of society that oppressive government deems to be an enemy of the state. Under such governance, the state becomes the enemy of the public. Are you your own Number 6, with the need for redemption, or are you simply another jailer inside a prison of your own construction?

Libertarian Party Campaign Chairman Flacking for Romney

By Mark Dankof

I still miss my late father, over three years after his passing. He taught me a great deal from the inside about the worlds of traveling, government, politics, sports, and human nature. His wisdom and insight always amazed me, coming from a small German American town in the American Midwest at the height of the Great Depression from a family that had nothing when it came to money, property, or education. It would be college football, World War II, the Army Air Corps, and my father's own initiative that would change his destiny. God directed it. My father followed it.

Last night I had a dream. The dream was striking, in that when I awakened at 2:17 this morning, I realized that what I saw in this nocturnal vision in the night was absolutely factual in reality, in what it depicted from over 43 years ago.

I was back in my parents' TV room adjacent to the living room on the first floor, in south Dayton. My father was stationed at Wright Patterson Air Force Base and its then Air Force Logistics Command (AFLC). I was in the 8th grade again. It was early January of 1969.

Dad and I had the TV on. We were watching NFL Today on CBS. The discussion was on the impending Super Bowl III match-up between the Don Shula coached Baltimore Colts (NFL), and the Weeb Eubank coached New York Jets (AFL) quarterbacked by counterculture hero Joe Namath.

The commentator was the late Bruce Roberts. He was mentioning that the betting point spread on the game was 18 points. Baltimore was an unheard of 18 point favorite to vanquish the Jets. It was obvious to me at the age of 13. Baltimore was a shoo-in.

My father said nothing. He inquired about everyone's food and drinks. He had me accompany him to the kitchen to help my mother retrieve more goodies.

Late that night, when everyone else was gone and my mother already asleep, my father and I returned to the subject of the Super Bowl and the point spread.

He became very serious when I repeated the mantra of the NFL Today show that the Colts were a shoo-in.

Wayne Allyn Root

"Don't be so sure on this. You remember the 8-1 spread favoring Liston over Clay (Muhammad Ali) in Miami Beach in February of '64?"

"Yes."

"You and I listened to that fight on my transistor radio in Alabama. You remember what happened?"

"This really smells to me, Mark. I learned a long time ago, something you should never forget."

"What's that, Dad?"

"A point spread of this margin, in a game of this magnitude, spells fix. It really smells to me. Look out."

Dad's pigskin prediction credentials won out. The smelliest of the smelliest is what happened occurred in the first half. It is chronicled for posterity by Wikipedia. I still occasionally see Tom Matte, Earl Morrall, and Jimmy Orr in my night thoughts decades later:

"On their ensuing possession, Baltimore went from their own 20-yard line to New York's 15-yard line in three plays, aided by Matte's 58-yard run. But with 2 minutes left in the half, Morrall was intercepted again, at the Jets' 2-yard line, deflating the Colts considerably. The Jets then were forced to punt on their ensuing drive, and the Colts advanced the ball to New York's 41-yard line.

"What followed is one of the most famous plays in Super Bowl history. Baltimore tried a flea flicker play, which had a huge impact on the momentum of the game. Matte ran off right tackle after taking a handoff, then pitched the ball back to Morrall. The play completely fooled the NBC camera crew, and the Jets defense, leaving receiver Jimmy Orr wide open near the end zone. However, Morrall failed to spot him and instead threw a pass intended for running back Jerry Hill that was intercepted by Jets safety Jim Hudson as time expired, maintaining the Jets' 7-0 lead at halftime. Earlier in the season, against the Atlanta Falcons, on the same play, Morrall had completed the same pass for a touchdown to Orr, the play's intended target. 'I was the primary receiver,' Orr said later. 'Earl said he just didn't see me. I was open from here to Tampa.' 'I'm just a lineman, but I looked up and saw Jimmy open,' added center Bill Curry. 'I don't know what happened.'

Years later, Colts lineman Bubba Smith said the game had been fixed. Talk swirled around then Colts owner, Carroll Rosenbloom, a known consorter with gamblers and rather loose with betting money of his own. Rosenbloom died a decade later in a "drowning accident," the subject of a documentary by the late Jessica Savitch of NBC News which suggested Rosenbloom's demise wasn't an accident, but that the long-time NFL denizen and sports gambler had been pulled under the water by several men in scuba diving gear. The truth? We will never know.

But it really smells to me.

Fast forward to 2012. The subject is Presidential politics in an election year. I'm already on record in stating the obvious: The winner of the election is the Israeli Lobby and the War Party.

Let us then proceed to the less obvious. What in hell is Libertarian Party National Campaign Chairman Wayne Allyn Root doing hurting his own third party candidates by flacking for Mitt Romney on Rupert Murdoch's Israeli-friendly News Corp. owned Fox News, with puff pieces like, "A Gold Medal for Romney in Tampa?"

The Libertarian-oriented Reason magazine is also wondering what is going on with this quixotic loon. They've got it partially figured out, as evidenced by this excerpt in Mike Riggs' op-ed:

"Root's bio identifies him as 'a former Libertarian vice presidential nominee' and 'Chairman of the Libertarian National Campaign Committee' and the author of a book titled 'The Conscience of a Libertarian.' You know what that means? It means Wayne Allyn Root is an ambassador for libertarianism, and that his columns are a direct reflection on the Libertarian Party, which has several times elected him to prominent positions despite the fact that he is a glistening PR disaster.

"That Root writes about Romney as if [Libertarian Party presidential nominee] Gary Johnson did not exist is awful. What's worse is that articles like Root's repel the kind of people Johnson needs in November.

"As for anyone who's still upset about The Weekly Standard's description of this year's LP convention as a 'goat rodeo: Why don't you direct your rage at the clown running the Libertarian National Campaign Committee?"

This really smells to me.

And then my dream about Dad this morning and Super Bowl III in 1969 enabled me to put it together. There is another Wayne Allyn Root gig on Fox News which is the Rosetta Stone in understanding how and why the Fix is In. Wayne Allyn Root is no Libertarian. He is a Zionist Jew, a neo-conservative, a War Party infiltrator of the only American third party which can seriously divert from Romney's vote totals in the critical states of Ohio, Florida, Virginia, North Carolina, and Colorado, the make-or-break states for Mitt and Sheldon Adelson in this election. The evidence is here. Is Wayne Allyn Root the War Party's ace-in-the-hole for their ultimate ace-in-the-hole in launching a war with Iran, good ol' Mitt? What is being leveraged against Obama here? Are General Martin Dempsey's remarks an indication that Netanyahu has now been forced to call in his chips with the Power Brokers who want war with Tehran? That Obama will be now be replaced at all costs? Time will tell.

Does all of this provide the real explanation as to why the Libertarian Party National Finance Chairman is flacking for the Project for the New American Century (PNAC) crowd? Flacking for a man who disenfranchised Ron Paul delegates at the Republican National Convention? What does Wayne Allyn Root believe about the Fed, fiat money, fractional reserve banking, the USA Patriot Acts, NSA warrantless wiretapping, the Department of Homeland Security, credit default swaps, mortgage banked securities, TARP, and derivatives?

Does this "Libertarian" buy Romney's recent statements about Russia? Does he support trillion dollar defense budgets? 10 billion dollars a month in Afghanistan? 5 trillion dollar expenditures in Iraq and Afghanistan before counting costs in Libya? Syria? Pre-emptive war with Iran? The USS Liberty attack? The Pollard spy case? Fiat money, perpetual war, perpetual intervention abroad, a foreign lobby buying American elections and controlling American foreign policy, and a burgeoning domestic police state largely undertaken at the behest of the Zionist State of Israel? All apparently supported by the Libertarian Party's National Campaign Finance Chairman as he works to get Mitt Romney elected.

It makes perfect sense to me. This guy isn't a quixotic loon at all.

It really smells to me. The fix is in.

What if I have a slightly different version of last night's dream about the Super Bowl tonight, only pertaining to the Presidential election of 2012? Try this on for size in the wee hours of the night as a political postmortem in the netherworld:

On their ensuing possession, the Freedom from War and Zionist Bankers Party went from their own 20-yard line to the Zionist War Party's 15-yard line in three plays, aided by Ron Paul's 58-yard run. But with 2 minutes left in the half, Wayne Allyn Root was intercepted again, at the Zionist War Party's 2-yard line, deflating the Freedom from War and Zionist Bankers Party considerably. The Zionist War Party was then were forced to punt on its ensuing drive, and the Freedom from War and Zionist Bankers Party advanced the ball to the Zionist War Party's 41-yard line. What followed is one of the most famous plays in American political history before the end of the American Empire.

"The Freedom from War and Zionist Bankers Party tried a desperation last ditch flea-flicker, which had a huge impact on the momentum of the game. Ron Paul ran off right tackle after taking a handoff, then pitched the ball back to Wayne Allyn Root. The play completely fooled the NBC, ABC, CBS, CNN, and Fox camera crews, and the Zionist War Party's defense, leaving receiver Gary Johnson wide open near the end zone.

However, Wayne Allyn Root failed to spot him and instead threw a pass intended for running back Lew Rockwell that was intercepted by William Kristol of The Weekly Standard as time expired, maintaining the Zionist War Party's 7-0 lead at halftime. Earlier in the season, against the Constitution Party, on the same play, Root had completed the same pass for a touchdown to Gary Johnson, the play's intended target. "I was the primary receiver," Johnson said later. "Wayne said he just didn't see me. I was open from here to Tampa, to Mitt Romney's suite entrance." "I'm just a lineman, but I looked up and saw Gary open," added grassroots Libertarian activist Karen De Coster. "I don't know what happened."

This really smells to me. And hopefully to you, the reader. The fix is truly in.

Note: On September 12, after repeatedly flacking for Romney Root resigned from the Libertarian Party.

"The danger to America is not Barack Obama, but a citizenry capable of entrusting a man like him with the presidency. It will be far easier to limit and undo the follies of an Obama presidency than to restore the necessary common sense and good judgment to a depraved electorate willing to have such a man for their president.

"The problem is much deeper and far more serious than Mr. Obama, who is a mere symptom of what ails America. Blaming the prince of fools should not blind anyone to the vast confederacy of fools that made him their prince. The Republic can survive a Barack Obama,, who is, after all, merely a fool. It is less likely to survive a multitude of fools, such as those who made him their President."

— from the Czech newspaper Prager Zeitungon

"There is no cause for despair, and even if there were no hope of achieving any visible result before the modern world collapses under some catastrophe, this would still be no valid reason for not undertaking a work whose scope extends far beyond the present time. Those who might be tempted to give way to despair should realize that nothing accomplished in this spiritual order can ever be lost, that confusion, error and darkness can win the day only apparently and in a purely ephemeral way, that nothing can ultimately prevail against the power of truth. . . The man who matters lives ini such a way that his existence is a sacrifice to his ideals."

Merlin Miller for President

This is the easiest endorsement for president The Nationalist Times has made in its 27 year history. Merlin Miller is a good and decent man who believes in and stands for all the right things. He's a breath of fresh air in a country slowly but surely strangling from a bizarre toxic mix of corruption, delusions and lies.

The "lesser of two evils" nonsense must be decisively rejected if America is to live. In the last decade, the government of the Disunited Cultural Marxist States of America has grown like a giant tumor, and now threatens not only the "homeland" but the entire world with annihilation.

The perpetual two-party monopoly is an illegitimate disgrace. The American people are in mortal danger because of their ignorance, but even they in large numbers want a more open political system rather than the Soviet Lite version that the U.S. Empire has fine-tuned over the generations. Watching the national conventions of the two monopoly gangs, with their party apparatchiks continually yelling "USA!" "USA!" "USA!" like Pavlov's dogs on steroids while smashing any kind of genuine dissent and open discussion only lends to the inescapable conclusion that this is a country gone not only totalitarian but mad.

The only discernible difference between Mitt Romney and Barack Obama is that if Obama is re-elected there is a 98 percent chance of the Zionist Axis – Washington, Tel Aviv and London – launching a war of aggression against Iran, whereas if Romney is elected it's a virtual 100 percent certainty. The U.S. has surrounded Iran with over 60 military bases, has in place a huge naval armada, and has already been engaged for years in a barely covert war against Iran involving propaganda, cyber-weapons, assassinations and psychological operations. It is difficult to see such massive war preparations simply being abandoned without being used.

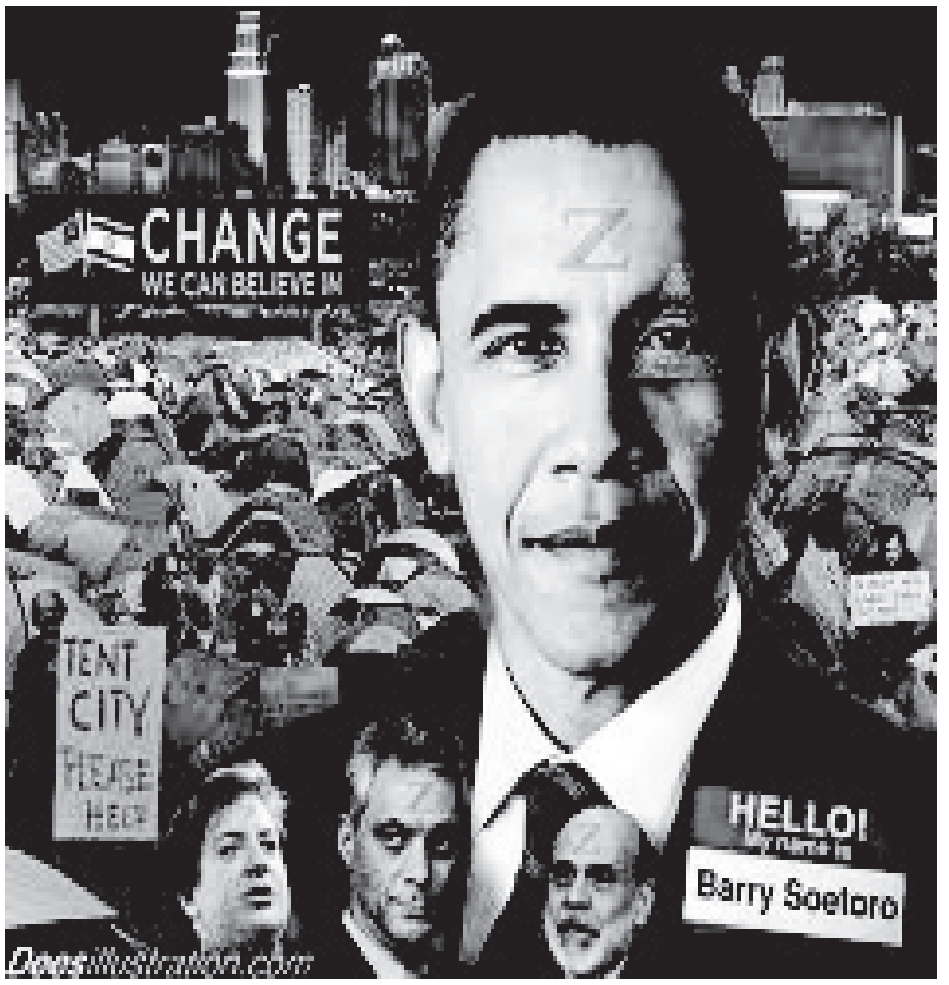
War with Iran at best will result in the deaths of many, many thousands of Iranian civilians along with the destruction of the infrastructure of one of the oldest civilizations on earth. At worst it will ignite a global war that might result in nukes and chemical weapons being used against America.

That alone is more than reason enough to vote for Merlin Miller and American Third Position as space limitations do not permit listing the many other severe internal and external problems facing the United States as a result of a government gone rogue and unaccountable.

What's obvious and inescapable and must be faced is that forced multiculturalism at home and constant warfare abroad can only be conducted by a totalitarian system of control. That is what voting for the "lesser of two evils" over the years has helped bring about.

Merlin Miller is on the ballot in Colorado, New Jersey and Tennessee. Some may pooh-pooh being on in only three states, but only because they are unaware of how very difficult it is for non-Republicrat political parties to get on the ballot, especially for a small new party like American Third Position. The bottom line is that Miller is the first patriotic, pro-White presidential candidate to be on the ballot anywhere since the 1992 election, when the Populist Party and Bo Gritz were on in 16 states. It's a start, a good start, and one that can and will be built upon.

If you don't live in Colorado, New Jersey or Tennessee, write in the name of Merlin Miller for President and Virginia Abernethy for Vice President on Election Day. Don't vote for the "lesser of two evils" — do something positive and vote for a ticket and party that every red-blooded American can be proud of.



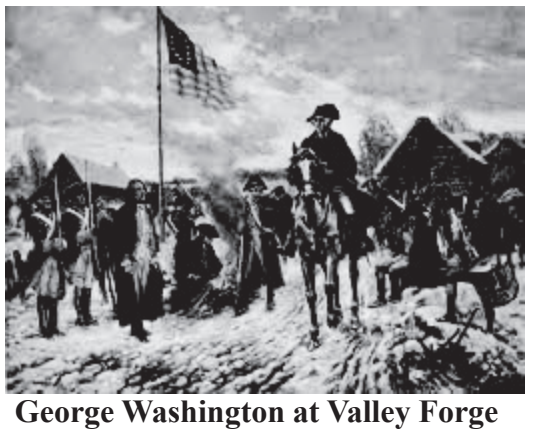
LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The New Amerika

I have heard it said, this election is the most important election in memory. Over the years it has been repeated. No doubt the presidential election in November 2012 will be the most important of all.

For years America has been traveling down the wrong road to destruction. It has led to another America, a far different America from what the Founders established.

This so-called "improved" America has led to an invasion of illegal aliens, who will not adopt American culture and the American way of life. The U.S. now has quotas, multiculturalism, "diversity," secular humanism, feminism, and affirmative action, which are destroying the country. Then there's the promotion of homosexuality, same-sex "marriages," the adoption of children by homosexuals, and the murder of 50 million babies through abortion. America's new heroes are psychopaths, crooks as politicians, and con artists.



George Washington at Valley Forge

In this new America, dead White men such as George Washington and Thomas Jefferson are hated and reviled. But the birthday of Martin Luther King Jr., a communist, plagiarist, woman abuser and adulterer, is honored with a national holiday.

If Obama is re-elected, it will be the final nail in the U.S. coffin! It may be too late to reform America, to restore the Constitution, and bring back decency and sanity.

Ray F. Dively
Baden, Pennsylvania

Romney the social liberal

From the John Birch publication, the New American (Sept. 3): "Romney says Boy Scouts should accept homosexual leaders." Seems Obama has the same view.

Hey – I thought Romney is a Mormon, a church that is conservative and supports strong morals.

What other surprises does Romney have for us?

Rick Schwemler
Cathedral City, California

The Three Stooges

The Three Stooges – Obama, Pelosi and Reid – like their movie counterparts have made a fine mess of things: undefended borders; multi-trillion dollar bailouts of companies that are not too big to fail (no company is too big to fail); loss of Constitutional liberties; selective non-enforcement of U.S. laws. Last, and also least, a childish stimulus plan. If the Three Stooges are allowed to remain in power, America's fate will not be very funny.

Same old, same old

Well, the conventions are over and now we await the debates. Do people really believe the empty promises made by the Democrats and Republicans? I, for one, never heard such a crock in my entire life. Every four years, we are bombarded with the same nonsense, platitudes, lies and worse: no specifics, just promises, promises.

Hopefully, we citizens are a little more savvy and will not fall for these lies, hook, line, sinker and fisherman! The damage done by hyperinflation of our currency will be almost impossible to recover from. Yet, the two candidates tell us they will fix everything, all they need is more time! Heaven help us, but please hurry!

Frank St. George

More guns, less killing

In the wake of recent mass shootings and killings, the liberals are scheming and trying their best to disarm Americans. They are asking a series of foolish questions to arouse those who are undermining our freedom and way of life: "Can we stop the killings? Answers seem elusive! Where do we begin?" The corporate media always has saturation coverage but no answers or solutions, other than of course "gun control."

I have the solution and you don't have to be particularly clever to see where I'm coming from. Most gun owners are law-abiding and shouldn't be punished for horrific crimes. In fact, the number of gun-related homicides in the U.S. has dropped by nearly 50% in the past 20 years, from 17,075 in 1993 to 8,775 in 2010 according to FBI data.

Disarming lawful citizens and banning assault weapons is only arming the criminals and criminalizing the law-abiding citizen. It will not work! We've tried that and should realize how foolish it was. The same guns are still for sale, less the cosmetic elements that make it an assault weapon. The guns still perform, and now they're in the hands of the criminals. Those who are going to kill will always do so; they did it with sticks and stones before there were guns.

Remember – there were no legal guns allowed in the Aurora, Colorado theater – the only one was in the hands of the accused murderer. The number of casualties could have been fewer if the lawful citizens had been allowed to carry guns to protect themselves and others.

The government needs to get serious about enforcing the laws that we already have on the books and administering punishment according to God's law. One thing proven to stop shootings during a mass shooting is an armed victim!

The collective guilt of the Jews

Only Adolf Hitler would talk of the collective guilt of the Jews, right? Wrong. A great many anti-Communist Russians spoke the same way at the time of the Bolshevik Revolution. One of their arguments was that if the Jews were not collectively responsible for the Bolshevik terror in which so many of their fellows participated, then the Russians, by the same logic, had no collective guilt for the pogroms. These debaters were arguing, in essence, that the Jews wanted collective responsibility for their enemies but not themselves.

The same argument applies today to the state of Israel and Jewish support for same. Applying the legal principle of accessory it can very reasonably be argued that the Jews of America are the accessories of the crimes of the Israelis. It is, after all, American Jews like Haim Saban and Sheldon Adelson who finance American politicians and demand that they support Israel as the price of that support. American Jews, like Samuel Newhouse, own the American media that lie and distort the facts on behalf of Israel.

Millions of American Jews, both personally and through Jewish organizations, send vast sums of money to support Israel and its usurpation of Palestinian land. Since Israel could not commit its crimes against Palestinians without the massive economic and political support it receives from American Jews, how can American Jews deny that they are the accessories of Israel's crimes? Logically, they can't.

But Jews will not tolerate logic that convicts them. American Jews aren't really Zionists because they live here, not in Palestine. They sing the praises of Israel the same way that the Yiddish New York press once sang the praises of Soviet Russia. Only Joseph McCarthy types would apply the principle of guilt by association. A few American Jews object to Israel's crimes the same way a few Jews refused to glorify Jewish gulag commissars of the 1930s. But the stray examples pale before the millions of Jews sobbing over the execution of the Rosenbergs or the millions denouncing Arab suicide bombers over the shrine of Baruch Goldstein.

American Jews love the flag of Israel today the same way they loved the hammer and sickle in the 1920s through 1940s. They love the Zionist flag far more than they love the Stars and Stripes. It is their choice — and the choice condemns them.

Corporate Socialism

Conservative females yapping about socialism while demanding maternity leave, like Megan Kelly, are quite amusing. Maternity leave is precisely corporate socialism for breeding. Anyone who reads the Communist literature on the "woman question" knows that equality for women in the job market and guaranteed maternity leave with full pay are basic Communist doctrine from the inception of the Bolshevik Revolution.

Feminism, in short, is Communism. "Conservative" feminists, in short, want to eat their cake and have it. They wish to denounce Communism while practicing it by competing with men in the job market. Naturally, the Megan Kellys of this world do not want to face the truth. To do so would mean admitting that they have been hoodwinked.

Feminism has always been the Bolshevik doctrine that women should be driven out of the home where they belong into the job market where they do not belong. Sex discrimination lawsuits are the Bolshevik principle of class warfare between the sexes. Women were, of course, never victims of sex discrimination. They were not victims of sex discrimination in getting everything in divorce court or walking away with the kids plus child support and alimony. They weren't victims of discrimination getting first place on the lifeboats or sitting on the sidelines while men did the fighting and dying. These women simply listened to the siren call of a Jewish Communist named Betty Goldstein/Friedan in 1963.

Megan Kelly is a silly media talking twitter know-nothing. Of herself, she is of no consequence. But she typifies so many idiot females who have adopted essentially Communist ideas while imagining that they are harbingers of progress.

COMMENTARY

The Message From Both Monopoly Parties is That Americans Are Disposable

By Paul Craig Roberts

If political conventions are ranked on a one to ten scale for intelligence, I give the Republican Convention zero and the Democrats one.

How can the United States be a superpower when both political parties are unaware of everything that is happening at home and abroad?

The Republicans are relying for victory on four years of anti-Obama propaganda and their proprietary programmed electronic voting machines. For nearly four years Republican operatives have flooded the Internet with portraits of Obama as a non-U.S. citizen, as a Muslim (even while Obama was murdering Muslims in seven countries), and as a Marxist (put in power by the Israel Lobby, Wall Street, and the military/security complex).

Most Republican voters will vote against Obama based on these charges despite the curious fact that no committee in the Republican-controlled House of Representatives held a hearing to determine if Obama is a citizen. If Obama were not a citizen, why would the very aggressive House Republicans not capitalize on it? It would be easy for a Congressional committee to determine if Obama were a citizen. Despite the propaganda, the Republicans in office have shown no interest in the propaganda charges spread by Republican operatives over the Internet.

Either Republicans have no confidence in the charges and do not want to end up proving with Congressional hearings that Obama is a citizen, or the Republicans, having destroyed every other aspect of the U.S. Constitution, reducing it to "a scrap of paper," feel that making an issue of the last remaining Constitutional provision other than the Second Amendment would be the height of hypocrisy and don't want to risk opening the constitutional issues that Republicans have run roughshod over.

If the Republicans can destroy habeas corpus, due process, violate both U.S. statutory and international law, ignore the separation of powers, and create a Caesar, why can't the Democrats run a non-citizen?

Why didn't the Republican convention raise the issue about the Obama regime's claim that the executive branch has the power to assassinate U.S. citizens without due process of law? No such power exists in the U.S. Constitution or in U.S. statutory law. This gestapo police state claim exists only as an assertion. Republicans ignored this most important of all issues, because they support it.

Why didn't the Democrat convention raise the issue that the Republicans took us to wars based on 9/11 assertions without ever conducting an investigation of 9/11? No qualified high-rise architect, structural engineer, physicist, chemist, or national security expert believes a word of the U.S. government's 9/11 story. Neither do the first responders who were on the scene and witnessed and experienced the event.

Why did not either party raise the question of how can the U.S. economy recover when corporations have off-shored millions of U.S. middle class jobs, both manufacturing jobs and professional service jobs. For at least a decade, the U.S. economy has been able to create only lowly paid domestic non-tradable (not exportable) service jobs, such as waitresses, bartenders, and hospital orderlies.

Both parties talk total nonsense about jobs. The Republicans say they can create jobs by not taxing the rich. The Democrats say they can create jobs by financing jobs programs. The Republicans say that the Democrats' jobs programs simply take money from business investments and give it to those who patronize bars and the drug trade. The Democrats say that the low taxes of the Republicans just subsidize yachts, exotic cars, private aircraft, and $800,000 wrist watches for the one percent, most of which is produced abroad.

Neither political party will admit that when U.S. corporations offshore their production for U.S. markets, Americans are removed from the incomes associated with the production of the goods and services that they consume. Offshoring is defended by both moronic political parties as "free trade." In fact, offshoring is the gift of what was U.S. GDP to China, India, and the other countries to which U.S. corporations locate their production that they sell to Americans. U.S. GDP goes down, the GDP of the countries who make the American goods sold to Americans goes up. The idiot free market economists call the de-industrializing of America "free trade."

Neither American political party recognizes this disconnect. Neither party can afford to recognize it, as both parties are dependent on corporate campaign financing, and offshoring boosts executive bonuses and share prices. A political party that opposes offshoring of U.S. jobs simply does not get financed.

So, the great "superpower," the "indispensable nation," the world hegemon, is going into an election, and no one knows what are the stakes.

Why did not either political party ask: if Washington has demonized Iran, why did the 120 countries that comprise the non-aligned movement convene in Iran last week?

Is Washington's propaganda failing? Can Washington no longer convince the world that the countries that Washington wants to destroy are evil and must be destroyed?

If Washington's propaganda is failing, the world rule of the hegemonic power will not succeed. As world rule is Washington's goal in keeping with the neo-conservative ideology, then Washington is failing and is not the superpower it pretends to be.

Most credible foreign policy experts, none of which either political party has, believe that Washington has thrown away U.S. "soft power" by its obvious lies and unjustified military attacks on seven Muslim countries, its encirclement of Russia with missile bases, and its encirclement of China with air, naval, and troop bases.

In other words, Washington's moral force no longer exists. All that exists is financial and military force, and both will fail as they are insufficient.

Neither party asked why the U.S. is at wars with Muslims for Israel. Why should Americans be losing lives and limbs for Israel while going broke and running up enormous war debts for our children and grandchildren? The answer from both parties is to blame the country's bankruptcy on what Washington does for its own economically disenfranchised citizens. America's financial problems are all the fault of Social Security, Medicaid, Medicare, food stamps, housing subsidies, Pell grants — any and every thing that gives a leg up to the non-one percent.

In short, the attitude of both parties is: if you are not the one percent, you are disposable.

Have any peoples in human history ever been less represented by their government and political parties than Americans? The U.S. government represents Israel and the one to ten percent. Everyone else is disposable.

Regardless of the political party whose lever is pulled in November, every American who votes will be voting for Israel and for their own demise.

A White Demise

By Fred Reed

I begin to weary of the endless denunciations of "white privilege;" the calls to end the dominance of malignant white men; the lawsuits to abolish all tests on which white men excel, meaning almost any test of mental ability; to make universities and police forces and advanced-placement classes "look like America." Often appended is the observation that by 2050 the majority of Americans will no longer be white. Invariably this is presented as a merited comeuppance and a laudable democratization.

Really? No doubt all of this is rousing good fun for the affirmative-action classes (which is what we mean by "minorities," not successful minorities such as men, Chinese, Jews, or geeks.) Yet perhaps we should be wary, all of us, about this much-sought dermal twilight, about abandoning standards of merit in favor of political appointment.

The beginning of wisdom might be to note the utter dependence of the U.S. on white men — men, guys, hombres — who have contributed virtually everything that keeps the affirmative-action classes from living in grass huts. A few examples:

Euclidean geometry. Parabolic geometry. Hyperbolic geometry. Projective geometry. Differential geometry. Algebra. Limits, continuity, differentiation, integration. Physical chemistry. Organic chemistry. Biochemistry. Classical mechanics. The indeterminacy principle. The wave equation. The Parthenon. The Anabasis. Air conditioning. Number theory. Romanesque architecture. Gothic architecture. Information theory. Entropy. Enthalpy. Almost every symphony ever written. Pierre Auguste Renoir. The twelve-tone scale. The mathematics behind it, twelfth root of two and all that. S-p hybrid bonding orbitals. The Bohr-Sommerfeld atom. The purine-pyrimidine structure of the DNA ladder. Single-sideband radio. All other radio. Dentistry. The internal-combustion engine. Turbojets. Turbofans. Doppler beam-sharpening. Penicillin. Airplanes. Surgery. The mammogram. The Pill. The condom. Polio vaccine. The integrated circuit. The computer. Football. Computational fluid dynamics. Tensors. The Constitution. Euripides, Sophocles, Aristophanes, Aeschylus, Homer, Hesiod. Glass. Rubber. Nylon. Roads. Buildings. Elvis. Acetylcholinesterase inhibitors. (OK, those are nerve agents, and maybe we didn't really need them.) Silicone. The automobile. Really weird stuff, like clathrates, Buckyballs, and rotaxanes. The Bible. Bug spray. Diffie-Hellman, public-key cryptography, and RSA. Et cetera.

Like it or not, there it is. White men can do these things, have done them, and continue to do them. The evidence shows that all the groups receiving affirmative action have not done them and, by all appearances, cannot — which is why they need affirmative action. Any who have the ability should have the opportunity, yes. (Bright idea: Why don't we do things without regard to race, creed, color, sex, or national origin? Naw, never fly.) History suggests that there will be few.

Of course, most of the minorities who benefit from these things have never heard of half of them. (In the 'hood: "Hey man, cool cell. I guess you're into code-division multiple access.")

The pattern of white men doing difficult things continues. Consider the founders of companies in information technology (from an earlier column):

Google (Sergei Bryn, Larry Page), Intel (Gordon Moore, Robert Noyce), Apple (Steve Jobs, Steve Wozniak), Microsoft (Bill Gates), Dell Computer (Michael Dell), Facebook (Mark Zuckerberg), YouTube (Chad Hurley, Steve Chen, Jawed Karim), Netscape (Mark Andreesen), Yahoo (Jerry Yang, David Filo), AMD (long list of guys from Fairchild Semiconductor), Twitter (Jack Dorsey), Wikipedia (Jimmy Wales, Larry Sanger), Unz.org (Ron Unz), PayPal (Peter Thiel), Ebay (Pierre Omidyar).

Not quite all white, but nearly so. All are men.

For that matter, anyone who watched the landing of Curiosity, the latest Mars rover, both Curiosity and the landing being astonishing demonstrations of engineering virtuosity, will have noticed that Mission Control consisted overwhelmingly of: White. Men.

I say all of this partly in exasperation at the endless ankle-biting from affirmative-action minorities. If I were rude, which I emphatically am not, I would say, "Invent your own goddam iPods." Yet the question is profoundly practical. The prosperity of America, its international competitiveness, depends very heavily on white men. Which means on a steadily diminishing proportion of the population.

Maybe this isn't cause for celebration.

If America were the only country on the planet, as many Americans seem to think it is, then affirmative action might be a supportable inefficiency, something like a golf handicap. But America is not the only country. Japan, China, and South Korea among others are full of smart, industrious, and ambitious people who are absolutely able to compete against the U.S. They are not going to cut us any slack. Their percentages of high-end talent are not falling. They don't do heartwarming social policy.

Yes, yes, I know. I will get stupid mail from stupider people saying that I am a white supremacist. No. I am a brain supremacist. If the entire faculty of Harvard came to consist of Jewish Koreans from Mumbai, I would be perfectly content, assuming they got there on merit. Or even if they came from New Jersey.

In pondering the coming unwhite America, it might be wise to consider how democracy will then work. In America we are accustomed to a rough balance of contending factions — liberals, conservatives, women, men, blacks, hispanics, feminists, hawks, doves, and so on. Values overlap, emphases change. Elections are often determined by a few percentage points. Any group potentially can influence the outcome, so politicians have to pay attention to the desires of all groups.

By contrast, if the electorate consists of two self-aware groups with utterly incompatible wishes, the smaller group is simply excluded from power. In South Africa, for example, whites have no hope for national office.

Note that blacks and whites indeed have such sharply differing values. Further, blacks do not like whites. They are quite as willing to impose their rule on whites as whites once were to impose their rule on blacks. Consider the following survey, from The Pew Research Center:

"Most notably, 62% of blacks say 'we should make every possible effort to improve the position of blacks and other minorities, even if it means giving them preferential treatment.' Just 22% of whites agree. When it comes to the social safety net, 78% of blacks today say 'the government should guarantee every citizen enough to eat and a place to sleep.'"

The idea that the government — which means white taxpayers — should provide everything suggests a great dimness of mind and poor grasp of the origin of specie. The belief apparently is that money comes from the government, as food comes from Safeway and cell phones from Radio Shack. A constantly dwindling number of whites at the mercy of a predatory welfare class can't and won't carry the rest of the population. If (or as) things get worse for them, they will simply flee the country.

The crucial question for an unwhite America is what hispanics will do — whether they will assimilate to white values or expect to be cared for by the government. They now make up 17% of the population versus 13% for blacks, and their numbers rise faster. Should they bloc-vote with blacks, the two will be able to demand anything at all and get it.

And that, in a competitive world, will be that.

"To your request of my opinion of the manner in which a newspaper should be conducted, so as to be most useful, I should answer, 'by restraining it to true facts and sound principles only.' Yet I fear such a paper would find few subscribers. It is a melancholy truth, that a suppression of the press could not more completely deprive the nation of its benefits, than is done by its abandoned prostitution to falsehood."

— Thomas Jefferson, letter to John Norvell, 1807

We Hate Big Brother

By Andy Nowicki

At the end of George Orwell's book "1984," hero and would-be revolutionary Winston Smith is tortured brutally by ghoulish government goons at the Ministry of Love. Following this ordeal, his will is utterly broken; he betrays his closest allies as well as himself; moreover, he learns to "love" Big Brother, the awful totalitarian entity who has made his life unbearably miserable. Winston himself gets absolutely nothing out of this bargain except a certain warped peace of mind and a perverse sense that he has in some way "done the right thing":

"He gazed up at the enormous face. Forty years it had taken him to learn what kind of smile was hidden beneath the dark moustache. O cruel, needless misunderstanding! O stubborn self-willed exile from the loving breast!...It was all right, everything was all right, the struggle was finished. He had won the victory over himself. He loved Big Brother."

As prescient as Orwell was, I'm not sure if he wouldn't have been somewhat astonished at the extent to which such savagely cruel methods have proven to be generally unnecessary mere decades later. A man of his time, Orwell saw sadistic boot-in-the-face uber-Stalinism as the ever-cresting wave of the future. But today, with the Soviet Union long dead and anti-white multicultural heterodoxy ascendant in the degenerate West, economic Marxism rejected for favor of Cultural Marxism, Big Brother's methodology has evolved. We now live in an age of polite totalitarianism, where only a bit of minor arm-twisting is needed to convince slightly reticent individuals to give way to the dictates of the prevalent ideology.

Such a circumstance would hardly be possible if there didn't exist in man an intense drive to conform, and to seek the approval of those with authority over him. The ardent childhood yearning to be patted on the head and called "good boy" never really leaves us, and this desire can be expertly exploited by those in control. Strange to say, man can indeed be shamed into violating his conscience and abandoning his principles; thus are dissidents brought effectively to heel.

I have examined this phenomenon before as a symptom of "cool crowd conformism." Following the classic Dr. Pepper jingle ("I'm a Pepper, he's a Pepper, she's a Pepper… wouldn't you like to be a Pepper too?"), Big Brother appeals to us not primarily as a figure of menace, but as a jovial, kind, and deeply righteous chap. He's having fun, and doing well, and we can have fun and do well too, if we just prove to be his obedient servants. If we refuse this request, however — well, that would really be a shame, a most unfortunate thing…Just think of how we'll be missing out, of the price we'll have to pay!

It is through the application of just such an approach that supposedly stalwart thought criminal-types are coerced into loving Big Brother, thus rendered gentle as lambs patiently awaiting a slaughter. We have recently seen various high-profile outfits do an about-face after an extensive engagement with the Zeitgeist-guardians. The evangelical Christian company Chick-Fil-A has cried "Mercy!" and agreed to accept the greasy embrace of Big Bro in exchange for not funding groups that oppose homosexual marriage. (Now they're claiming that it's all a misunderstanding, but the cow doth protest too much, methinks). Augusta National, the golf club of the Masters tournament, has meanwhile consented to a mandated estrogen injection, having invited no less a luminary than former Secretary of State Condeleeza Rice to join their former all-men's club. Hell, even Southern rock gods Lynyrd Skynyrd have turned on their beloved Confederate flag! Who will be the next to fall, the latest to forsake his heritage, his traditions, his values, his manhood?

What we see before us is a ghastly spectacle of endless surrender and retreat. And against the backdrop of such a conspicuous slide into craven cowardice, hearty resistance and refusal to backtrack, back down, or in any way apologize is in itself a revolutionary act.

We here at Alternative Right — contributors and readers alike — have our significant ideological differences. But I think I speak for everyone when I say that we will never stop hating, despising, jeering and flouting at Big Brother, no matter which form he may choose to take. We are the few, we happy few, the band of brothers, who — whether due to conviction or principle or out-of-fashion dogma or sheer stubbornness — opt to stand firm against the relentless tide.

Stay strong, comrades! Stick to your guns, and refuse to bend, much less break, to please anyone. Resolutely decline to love Big Brother, and great will be your reward.

In Unity there is Strength

Join the American Nationalist Union

The American Nationalist Union is a group of Americans who seek to influence the political process by making nationalist solutions to America's problems better known and accepted. The ANU is not affiliated with any political party; rather we support individual candidates along with independent and third parties which share the same basic outlook.

Basic Platform of the American Nationalist Union

- Repeal U.S. participation in NAFTA and GATT and protect American jobs and industries.
- Balance the federal budget now and return to a constitutional money system.
- Abolish the IRS and the federal income tax, to be replaced with tariffs and a consumption tax of no more than 8%.
- Establish a ten-year moratorium on all immigration, construct a security fence along the entire Mexican border, and deport all illegal aliens back to their place of origin.
- Repeal all gun control legislation, and reaffirm the Second Amendment right of all law abiding Americans to be armed in order to protect their family and property, and, when necessary, be able to defend against governmental tyranny.
- Withdraw from the United Nations and oppose the New World Order in all its forms.
- Greatly reduce the size of the federal government, ending the permanent welfare/warfare state by restricting the federal government only to those powers granted it by the Constitution.
- Support private schools and home schooling, and return control of public schools to local communities.
- Return to a strengthened family unit as the norm for society, rejecting feminism, homosexuality and all other types of so-called "alternative lifestyles."
- Reject liberalism and neo-conservatism as the ideologies of the New World Order, alien, totalitarian creeds that must be regarded as America's internal enemies and be resisted as strongly as communism has been.
- Return to freedom of association in all matters, including voluntary racial separation, along with the abolishment of all forms of racial discrimination, including affirmative action and quotas.
- Give Americans freedom of choice in all matters concerning health and medical treatments.
- Let abortion be a states rights issue, decided by the people and legislatures of each state rather than by a Supreme Court which acts too often as an unelected legislature.
- Allow self-determination for all peoples and nations, while opposing the exploitation or oppression of any country or group of people.
- Dismantle the federal government's police state spying apparatus and return to Americans their privacy rights; end all totalitarian guilty-until-proven-innocent roadblocks.
- Greatly reduce foreign aid.
- Terminate NATO and substantially reduce the United States' worldwide military empire, end internal meddling in the affairs of others countries, while maintaining a strong military for legitimate defensive purposes.
- Have equal ballot access laws for all political parties, and return to the paper ballot in elections in order to cut down on election fraud and manipulation.
- Begin a renewed commitment to space exploration as a healthy expression of Western man's inherent need to discover and explore.

America badly needs a united bloc of voters who will vote for those candidates who stand for these principles. It's time to end the fracturing of America's dispossessed working and middle class into endless factions and splinter groups. A united bloc of Nationalist Americans can elect a government that will serve the great Middle American core which built America and which still sustains it, but which finds itself today without political representation.

CULTURAL CURRENTS

Patriotic Anti-Zionism

By Yancey Ames

When will Americans ever recover the wisdom of their ancestors? They have lost it on all kinds of subjects.

Most Americans have never read the wisdom of their ancestors on the subject of Palestine. The reports of American diplomats and consular officials of the late 19th century up to the establishment of the state of Israel in 1948 make an interesting comparison to the present media propaganda.

In the days when Palestine was under the jurisdiction of the old Ottoman Empire, pre-World War One, two American consuls in Jerusalem, the three-time consul Selah Merrill and the Reverend D. L. Glazebrook, took a very dim view of the Zionist colonists in Palestine. Glazebrook, in particular, regarded them as followers of Lenin and Trotsky. After the 1906 aliyah many of these Jews were members of Dov Ber Borochov's Poale Zion party, founded that very year. Borochov had achieved fame as a synthesizer of Zionism and Marxism, arguing that the peculiar historical circumstances of the Russian proletariat required that the prophecies of Marx be fulfilled on Palestinian soil, not Russian soil.

When the First World War came, these associations became even stronger with the Jewish Bolshevik revolution in Russia. The British mandatory authorities then in control in Palestine believed that the 1920 and 1921 riots between the Jews and Arabs had largely been instigated by Jewish Communist elements among the Zionist immigrants from Russia. The then Colonial Secretary, Winston Churchill, urged that these undesirable elements be deported from Palestine.

It's a well documented fact that many of the Jews in Palestine at the time of the Bolshevik Revolution were well wishers of the Soviet system. The aforementioned Borochov was to return from Palestine to Russia to lead various Red Brigades before perishing of pneumonia. A Professor Pavel Myerson, teacher of Yiddish, wrote inflammatory essays under the watchful eyes of the British authorities praying that the Red Army would cross the Caucasus Mountains to liberate Palestine with hammer and sickle. The association between Jews and Communism became even more inflamed during the Wailing Wall riots of 1929. The American consul in Palestine, Paul Knabenshue, wrote lengthy reports to his superiors in Washington, linking the disturbances to Communist Jews and generally attacking the Zionist enterprise as a whole.

Knabenshue took the position that the Balfour Declaration had never promised a Jewish state but a Jewish national home. The Arabs, not the Jews, had done the fighting for the British culminating in Allenby's victory at Meggido/Derra in October 1918. The British had then betrayed the Arabs, to whom they had promised Palestine in the Hussein-MacMahon correspondence of October 1915, to curry the "golden purse" of the Jews in the Balfour Declaration of November 2, 1917.

Knabenshue, like many of his superiors, felt that the immediate cause of the riots were of less importance than the more fundamental causes, which were justifiable Arab resentment over the Jewish invasion of their country. The American State Department, under Henry Stimson, refused Jewish demands that America send warships and troops to protect the lives of Jewish-Americans in Palestine. No official State Department condemnation of the riots was issued; the matter being deemed a problem for the British mandatory authorities to handle.

Demands that private troops of former Jewish war veterans be sent to Palestine were equally rejected by the State Department. When Senator William Borah of Idaho loudly demanded U.S. government action to protect the Jews in Palestine, an internal British document commented: "Senator Borah seems to imagine that the world trembles every time he opens his mouth."

The New York Republican Congressman, Hamilton Fish, who was one of the Congressional drafters of the 1922 resolution endorsing the Balfour Declaration, visited the head of the Near Eastern and African Affairs Division of the State Department, Wallace Murray. Fish and his British Labor Party colleague, Major Daniel Hopkin, tried to convince Murray of the weakness of the Arab nationalist case but failed. Murray believed that the Arab right of possession of the land was far stronger than the claim of Jewish capital developing the land. Murray later met with the renowned George Antonius, author of the future book, "The Arab Awakening," and was impressed by his arguments.

The British authorities in London, administrators of the Palestine mandate, derived some support and satisfaction from the anti-Zionist American State Department. The British also knew that at the time there existed substantial British anti-Zionism in America, similar somewhat to the wise English Jews like Lucien Wolfe, Moses Montefiore, Edwin Montagu, Philip Magnus, Leonard Cohen and others who had opposed the Balfour Declaration. These anti-Zionist American Jews were led by the banker Felix Warburg and the owner of The New York Times, Adolf Ochs (whose leading reporter on Palestine, Joseph Levy, was a firm anti-Zionist).

The Jewish wailing and gnashing over the Wailing Wall riots of 1929 really did not amount to very much, particularly when still another British White Paper, the Shaw Report of 1929, came out against them. The record of State Department antagonism to Zionism would seem to confirm what the Zionist leader, Chaim Weizmann, maintained in "Trial and Error," his autobiography, that public leaders always stood with Zionism, while reactionary elements in the various foreign offices always stood against it.

As the eventual creation of Israel approached, the reactionary elements became more acute. Numerous American Cabinet officials, like Secretary of Defense James Forrestal and State Department officers like Loy Henderson, warned President Truman against recognizing a Zionist state. In England, various Conservative MPs like Edward Spears and Major Stanton Beamish asserted that the Zionists in Palestine showed alarming similarities to both the recently defeated Nazis and the Jewish Bolsheviks in Russia. These similarities were being made very clear by the never-ending assassinations of British soldiers and officials by the Zionist terror underground.

Loy Henderson, in particular, who had served the Department in Russia during the height of the Stalinist terror, was emphatic that the Zionists pouring into Palestine after the war from the Iron Curtain countries wore hammer and sickle political colors. Henderson had seen the Jewish terror of Communism up front and knew whereof he spoke.

Truman, as history documents, caved to the Jewish pressure and recognized Israel. Ever since, Americans have been regaled with the mythology of the Zionist state. But the documented record of patriotic anti-Zionism, maintained by the American State Department for three decades before 1948 (if not longer), is there for all to see.

Northern Voice Books - Sale, All Prices Reduced

The Immigration Mystique, by Chilton Williamson, Jr. The interests pushing massive immigration often try to silence opposition by endlessly repeating that "we are a nation of immigrants." This book sets the record straight on the history of immigration to the U.S. and effectively establishes immigration control on the high moral ground. Softcover, 202 pgs. $8.95

A History of Secret Societies, by Arkon Daraul. Almost every social system has produced its secret societies. Here is a unique, sensational study of such societies from the earliest recorded times to the present, and an analysis of their forms, rituals, and beliefs. Much source material never before revealed is given by the author. Softcover, illus., 256 pgs. $10.95

Advance to Barbarism: The Development of Total Warfare, by F. J. P. Veale. Frederick J. Veale's Advance to Barbarism is a concise exposure of the injustice and hypocrisy of the Nuremberg Trials which began in 1946. Veale simply wrote a great book, and this book should be a warning to those who consider "war criminals" to be those who are far away and so defined by phony media "experts" who are ignorant of these staged trials and morality plays. An Eye for an Eye, by John Sack. Updated and revised edition. Horrifying account of atrocities committed against German civilians by Jews in the aftermath of WWII. Long-suppressed story – by a fearless Jewish author and noted journalist – of how Jews of the Polish Communist "Office of State Security" killed and brutally mistreated many tens of thousands of German men, women and children in concentration camps and prisons in conquered German territories. Softcover, 280 pgs. $14.95

Falsehood in Wartime, by Arthur Ponsonby. Classic debunking of the propaganda lies politicians and the press manufactured about the enemy to stampede their own citizens into "the war to end all wars." British MP Ponsonby reveals how all the belligerents, but foremost his own country, faked documents, falsified photos, and invented horrifying atrocity stories. Authoritiavely debunks numerous wartime hoaxes, including such tales as: the bayoneted Belgian babies, the German "corpse factory," the martyrdom of Nurse Cavell, and the "passenger ship" Lusitania. Softcover, 192 pgs. $18.95 (very hard to find)

A Trial on Trial: The Great Sedition Trial of 1944, by Lawrence Dennis and Maximilian St. George. The Sedition Trial of 1944 has been consigned to the Orwellian memory hole by America's post-World-War-Two political, economic, intellectual, cultural, academic and media establishments. After all, a basic and unquestioned premise of all post-war Establishment thinking has been the necessity and nobility of FDR's interventionist warmongering. Lawrence Dennis was himself one of the twenty-nine defendants charged with conspiring to undermine the morale of the armed forces in violation of the Smith Act of 1940. His co-author Maximilian St. George, was defense attorney for Joseph McWilliams, another of the defendants in the trial. Softcover, 503 pgs. $13.95 (very hard to find)

Life After Terrorism, by Bruce D. Clayton, Ph.D. Protecting your family from terrorism in today's world requires an astonishing breadth of knowledge on topics ranging from microbiology and radiological defense to proper waste storage, government disaster response, and escape routes to and from where you live and work. This book will scare you, educate you, entertain you, and make you think. Most important, it will prepare you for life after terrorism. Softcover, 176 pgs. $11.95

Hostile Ground, by Edward Lewis. Our personal and professional lives often put us in contact with people who exhibit intimidating, menacing and sometimes violent behavior. Lewis has faced over a thousand such confrontations as part of a professional restraint team at a mental health facility and on the streets, and in those environments he discovered the psychological and physical secrets of defusing hostile subjects and restraining their attacks. Softcover, photos, 152 pgs. $16.95

Oz in the New Millennium, by Dr. Adrian H. Krieg. "Oz" is about the collapse of America as a republic and its conversion by the "progressive" wing of the Democrat Party into a failing empire. Congress now has over 70 "progressives" and they control the White House and Federal Reserve as well. Those who have power over money and its issuance control the society. This Obamanation is the destruction of independent thought through media control, and the elimination of private enterprise through the nation's conversion into European socialism. You will learn the simple solutions to this Obama made dilemma as well as what inaction by the citizenry will result in. Softcover, 218 pgs. $19.95

The White Geek

By Ralph A. Brandt

This month's installment will be about the magazine Instauration. Instauration was published by Wilmot Robertson. It discussed many issues about race and culture that other publications were afraid to touch. Some have said that it was one of the best magazines about white common sense ever delivered to patriots. The first issue was published in 1975, and the last issue was published in 2000. Recently there was an ambitious project to copy all issues of this magazines into electronic media. Now all 291 issues are available in PDF format. If you go to Google and type in "Instauration Magazine," it will take you where you need to go.

I went there recently and, just out of idle curiosity, downloaded and printed out the first issue, which was dated December, 1975. The whole issue was contained in 20 pages.

Page 1 was the front cover of the magazine. It looked kind of cool to see "Vol. 1, No. 1."

Page 2 was titled "The Safety Valve." It was a letters to the editor section. Since this was the first issue of the magazine, most of the letters were in response to Mr. Robertson's prospectus.

One of the letters read as follows: "Your proposed title Instauration is a bit obscure, and might be an embarrassment to those who have not had a love affair with Sir Francis! If you like the title, why not render the archaic form into a more complete modern translation: The Magnificent Unraveling."

I had some difficulty understanding this letter, so I did a bit of research. Sir Francis Bacon was an English philosopher who lived from 1561 to 1626. Sir Francis Bacon had a brainchild that he called "The Great Instauration." Bacon claimed that in the original state of Paradise, all mankind was ignorant. The goal of The Great Instauration was to illuminate mankind so that men would know the truth. This would make them ready for the second coming of Paradise.

Bacon wanted to use the work of the Almighty as a template for his own work. God created the earth in six days. Bacon divided The Great Instauration into six parts. They are as follows: (1) a survey of the state of things together with a plan to take action; (2) the discovery, acquirement, and development of a method; (3) the collection of history — a data bank — on which to draw; (4) the presentation of the data to the eyes and heart by means of suitable drama and illustrated examples; (5) the drawing out of temporary axioms or ideas of truth derived from the experience of the drama; and (6) the development of final axioms or certainties as a result of putting ideas into action.

Wilmot Robertson wanted to respect the anonymity of people who sent letters to the editor, so he did not publish their names. He only published the first three digits of their zip codes. One of the letters to the editor complained that unsigned letters do not gain much credibility. He said that if the authors of the letters do not want their names published they should at least use pseudonyms.

Another letter suggested that Wilmot Robertson not directly criticize conservatives like William F. Buckley or the John Birch Society. The letter mentioned that it would make us look bad to their followers — people who may eventually recognize the error of their ways and the truth of ours.

One article in this issue was about George Wallace. It talked about an iconic photograph of Wallace in front of the University of Alabama, standing his ground while the Feds threatened him with a court order. The liberal media circulated this photograph far and wide in an effort to sink Wallace. It had the opposite effect. It buoyed Wallace up with his constituents.

Instauration was published from 1975 to 2000

The best article in this issue is titled "Economics and Race." Its subtitle is "A Genetic View of the Dismal Science." It pointed out how race has often been left out of economics. In his book The Wealth of Nations, Adam Smith compared the continent of North America with the continent of Africa. He had his own theory about why North America had a growing economy while Africa had practically no economy at all. It was because North America had a much better set of waterways than Africa. Smith never explained why the Indians were never able to exploit these waterways while the white men were.

The article made reference to an article in Readers Digest in March of 1974. It ranked the economies of different countries by gross national product. West Germany ranked third in the world in industrial output. East Germany had a population of 17 million and oppressive communist government. Nonetheless, its economy was ranked tenth in the world. East Germany's economy ranked higher than Italy's or Britain's. What could account for this? One thing East Germany had going for it was the race of its inhabitants.

The article mentioned that in times of depression, inflation, or usurious interest rates, people grow more interested in economics. In times like now, people are interested in learning the differences between Keynesian economics and laissez faire. In more prosperous times, people cannot be bothered with economic theory. They are too focused on their professions or their trades.

I would like to quote four paragraphs from this article verbatim:

"In political terms democracy is taken over by a motley collection of brawling minorities and dropouts from the dominant race. In economic terms production begins to play second fiddle to consumption. The independent and creative entrepreneur is forced to share power with the labor leader. Wages go up, profits and productivity go down. Economists put out reams of propaganda to justify this downshifting of economic gears. They worry about demand and forget about supply. They experiment with the monetary system and with taxation. The sicker the economy becomes, the more they doctor it and the more they doctor it, the sicker it becomes.

"Finally, control over what is left of the private sector of the economy passes from the businessman to the accountant. In the public sector, where all the principal reins of economic power are now held, the president's economic advisers turn out to be minority theorists, most of whom have never have never had any manufacturing background, never worked on a production line, never invented or designed a product, never had any firsthand experience with the work process which created the wealth that was so enticing to their immigrant parents or grandparents.

"In the advanced stages of economic decay (the stages we are now reaching in this country) the government takes over the direction of more and more areas of the economy and operates them to the advantage of those who do the least work, who do no work at all, or who do non-productive work, such as lawyers, bankers, speculators, criminals, and bureaucrats.

"In the U.S., the Majority work force now finds itself saddled with the responsibility of supporting not only its own young, aged, and infirm, but the young, aged, and infirm of the minorities, plus millions of healthy colored minority members who refuse 'menial' work or who are incapable of becoming skilled workers in an increasingly technological society. The trick is mainly accomplished by debasing the currency and by orgies of deficit spending. It takes several decades for the producing and working man to catch on to this con game. When he does, he discovers that his savings, his net worth, and his real wages have been locked into an inescapable downward spiral."

This article was written over 37 years ago. That makes 3.7 decades. Has the producing and working man caught on to this con game yet?

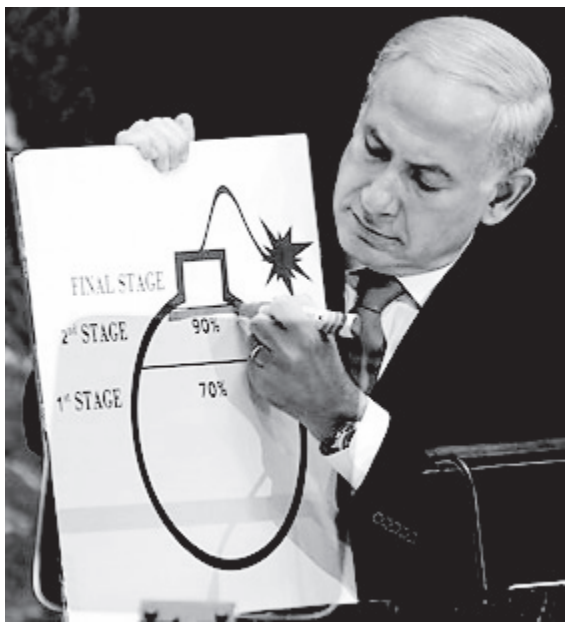
The author then goes on to discuss possible solutions to this problem. He mentions that the abolition of private businesses dispossesses everyone. He claims that it takes away the vast wealth of the Jews, one of the causes of our dispossession. There may be some truth to that. Russia suffered under 70 years of communism, but, in the end, Vladimir Putin was able to dethrone the Jewish oligarchs.

The author recommends that the science of economics be given an overhaul. Economists need to agree on standard definitions so that economics will have the rigor of astronomy, physics, or law. You know something is wrong with the science of economics when Paul Krugman, a shameless Keynesian, wins the Nobel Prize. Paul Krugman claimed that G. W. Bush's and Obama's stimulus of $700 billion was not enough. (Incidentally, it was Paul Krugman who blamed the shooting of Gabrielle Giffords on Sarah Palin.)

I remember the time that I first became racially aware. When I first became familiar with names like William Luther Pierce or George Lincoln Rockwell, my reaction was, "How did I live so long without knowing about this?" This first issue of Instauration caused a similar reaction. It turns out that many surprising discoveries I have made over the years had in fact been common knowledge for quite some time.

INTELLIGENCE REPORT

While Washington and its television and Hollywood media arms confidently portray the Glorious Imperial Cultural Marxist Empire as always in control, as The Nationalist Times has been pointing out for years, in reality the Empire is being afflicted by many small cuts on many fronts. No one will take on Washington frontally, but thanks to its control by Zionists, banksters and multinational corporate interests, the U.S. has managed the post-9/11 feat of being almost universally feared and hated, and opposition to the coven of neo-cons who have captured Washington's foreign policy and are trying to rule the world is manifesting itself in many different ways. The epicenter of world tensions remains the Middle East, and in late September the propaganda battle moved to the UN, where Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad and Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu both gave speeches stating their cases. Ahmadinejad was unstinting in his call for a "new world order," one without domination by Washington, while Netanyahu emphasized the latest trend among Zionist extremist elements in the U.S. of portraying the issue as one of civilized people vs. "savages," which happens to be the theme of a series of ads running in the New York City subways and other transport systems across the country these days. But Israel is increasingly isolated outside of the U.S., and Netanyahu's speech, replete with a cartoon drawing of a bomb as a prop, was met with a lot of derision, including inside the U.S. Justin Raimondo of antiwar.com wrote: "It's no wonder the Israeli Foreign Ministry initially held back from releasing a transcript of Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu's speech to the UN General Assembly: Bibi's wackiness doesn't bear close scrutiny. . . The cartoonish quality of the bomb drawing underscored the content and tone of the speech, which was the jeremiad of a radical ideologue rather than anything one would expect from a statesman: 'Today a great battle is being waged between the modern and the medieval. Israel stands proudly with the forces of modernity. We protect the right of all our citizens, men and women, Jews and Arabs, Muslims and Christians, all are equal before the law.' Israel, which privileges its priestly caste, has a state religion, and bases its national mythology on a 'promise' from G-d, is as medieval as any of its neighbors. Aside from being a lie, however, this statement is interesting because it evokes the very same supremacist spirit that animates the controversial pro-Israel public relations campaign launched by the Jewish state's extremist American supporters. This idea that Israel represents 'modernity' is rich, considering that every day Israeli society is sinking lower into the morass of religious and cultural fundamentalism, a regression that has not gone unnoticed in the West. Bibi opened his speech with biblical references, describing Jerusalem as the 'eternal capital' of Israel and declaring that 'the Jewish state will live forever.' Yet. . . nothing lives 'forever,' and the idea of a city being the 'eternal' capital of anything is a metaphor, at best, at worst a dangerous delusion. If this is the 'modern' then one wonders how much it differs from the 'medieval.' . . . The Israeli Prime Minister may have been addressing the UN General Assembly, but he was really talking to the Americans, whose fear and loathing of the perpetrators of the 9/11 attacks can always be counted on to raise them to new levels of hysteria. . . In a rational world, Israel would be in the dock, answering for its unwillingness to come out of the nuclear closet and admit what the whole world knows by now. Indeed, Bibi could give us some insight into exactly how Israel acquired the materials to build its formidable nuclear arsenal – since, according to recently declassified documents, he was directly involved. . . . . Netanyahu and his fellow Zionist extremists have been crying wolf about Iran's nuclear program *since 1992. Twenty years ago, as a member of the Israeli parliament, Netanyahu predicted that Iran was "3 to 5 years" from having a nuclear weapon. That same year Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres predicted an Iranian nuke "by 1999." In 1995, The New York Times quoted various U.S. and Israeli officials who said Iran would have nuclear weapons "by 2000." In 1998, Donald Rumsfeld, an accomplished liar if ever there was one, told Congress that Iran could be threatening the U.S. with an "intercontinental ballistic missile" by 2003. Then in 2002 the dullard George W. Bush coined the term "axis of evil" with Iran, Iraq and North Korea the members, and the "Iran almost has a nuke" hysteria continued from that point on with ever increasing intensity – mostly from the same liars and war criminals who claimed Iraq had "weapons of mass destruction." . . . . . Another sign that U.S./Israeli influence is waning is the fast growth of the Non-Aligned Movement. For a long time, virtually all non-Western countries used to vote against the U.S. at the UN, forcing Washington to use its veto over and over again, particularly in regard to resolutions condemning Israeli conduct. Then, for a while in the 1990s and 2000s, Washington was able to summon large majorities at the UN, as many Third World countries became U.S. puppets of one kind or another in the heady early days of the "New World Order." But in the past few years the tide has turned once again, to the point that over 150 nations and international bodies attended a Non-Aligned Conference held by Iran in early September. The turnout was "in spite of intense efforts by the U.S. and Israel to deter attendance," wrote columnist Eric Margolis, who noted that the "big turnout marked a major failure by Washington to further tighten its siege of Iran. Of particular note was the presence of India's prime minister, Manmohan Singh. India refused to bow to U.S. pressure to boycott the event and announced future energy, trade and transport deals with



Netanyahu the yahoo

Tehran." Margolis also wrote: "In past years, most non-aligned conferences, whose objective was to find a middle way between the West and Soviet Empire, produced only hot air, often quite anti-American. As America's world power declines after the loss of two wars and a deep recession, the NAM meeting in Tehran may be a step, albeit small, towards moving away from today's unipolar world towards a more balanced, equitable international system." . . . . . Speaking of lost wars, the debacles in Afghanistan and Iraq have barely been mentioned by Obama and Romney on the campaign trail, not a surprise since both monopoly parties are four-square in support of more undeclared wars of aggression around the world, Iran most prominently but also many little "hot" wars that are more and more conducted by drones and special forces and often waged in secret. Philip Giraldi of antiwar.com summed it up this way: "Afghanistan, President Obama's 'good war' and a war that the GOP would prefer to forget, takes center stage because it continues to consume American lives and resources and it is rapidly developing into a bottomless pit into which billions of dollars will pour without any tangible gains. It would be good to hear an honest assessment from the president, noting that the training program is bedeviled by increasing 'green on blue' violence that is threatening to derail the handover to Afghan forces, and confronting honestly the problem of massive corruption and drug trafficking that mean that no nation building can be successful. Every American who follows the news knows that to be true, so why shouldn't the president say it, abandoning any pretense of fudging his way through another year and then escaping shortly before the point where it is necessary to send in helicopters to take survivors off the roof of an American Embassy under siege. From the Republicans, it would be interesting to learn what exactly they expect the generals to tell them that would be (a) credible or (b) would alter the developing narrative about overwhelming corruption, Afghan security forces incompetence, and lack of any exit strategy or endgame. Both Republicans and Democrats should explain why leaving in 2014 will be any more 'victorious' or successful than leaving tomorrow, as Clint Eastwood somewhat whimsically suggested. And then there is the postmortem on the recent big war just completed. Have I heard President Obama or Mitt Romney admit that Iraq was a massive failure at a cost of nearly 6,000 American lives and possibly trillions of dollars, producing an unstable yet fundamentally autocratic regime that cannot maintain security and is leaning politically toward Iran? Again, most Americans have figured it out, so why can't the politicians say it, respond to it, and learn something from it? And then there is the global war on terror, which includes all the little wars and 'constabulary actions' that have sprung up in places like Yemen, Libya, Syria, Somalia, Uganda, Kenya, Mauritania, Mali, Colombia, the Philippines, and Pakistan. Do any of those places threaten the security of the United States? I think not, with the possible exception of Pakistan, which is in crisis precisely because of the American intervention in the region. Shouldn't someone be explaining exactly why humanitarian interventionism should be a driver of U.S. foreign policy or, alternatively, why Washington should be using armed force as a first option in situations where there is no demonstrable threat? Shouldn't someone at least make an effort to justify drone warfare? Or extrajudicial killing of U.S. citizens overseas as a response to terrorism?" Don't expect any answers from sock puppets Obama and Romney. At least polls show that in spite of the eagerness of the corporate media to ignore the wars -- except when they aren't constantly urging Americans to "support the troops" through the ubiquitous presentation of one or a few soldiers for recognition at sports events and other bread and circus spectacles -- 70 percent of Americans are opposed to a unilateral U.S. attack on Iran according to a survey by the Chicago Council on Global Affairs. . . . . After the U.S. ambassador to Libya, Chris Stevens, was killed the government and its media arm immediately went into spin mode. Hillary Clinton marveled at how Libyans could be so ungrateful after the U.S. had been instrumental in the overthrowing and killing of Muammar Gaddafi. Colin Liddell of alternative right.com had a helpful suggestion to clarify what happened for future similar events: "Missing from the prim little network reports that brought this news to the uncomprehending public is the whiff of geopolitical naivety, the pong of inept deculturalization, and the stench of reckless destabilization that inevitably emanates from America's dealings with the non-Jewish Middle East. But most of all these bare accounts miss the exquisite sense of karma that this action actualizes: a few short months after the USA brought about the lynching of the country's previous leader, its own ambassador is killed in a remarkably similar fashion by the same nasty Islamic id that was unleashed and empowered on that occasion by USA foreign policy. The paltry phrases of AP and Reuters, and the dumbspeak of Clinton, are incapable of touching this event and doing it justice, and, because they don't, the blindspot will remain and fresh incidents of a similar nature are certain to occur. New concise words have to be coined to bring meaning and insight to these meaningless acts. In fact a whole 'Politicosaurus' of new terminology will have to be filled to help shed light on and knit understanding of America's increasingly arcane interaction with the rest of the world. As a first contribution to this massive lexical project let me offer a new transitive verb 'gaddafi' as in to gaddafi someone or to be gaddafied, meaning to be killed by an angry Islamic mob usually against a background of American cultural and political destabilization undertaken in the name of democracy." . . . . . According to Mitt Romney, 47% of Americans are dependent on government assistance of one kind or another, which is a pretty accurate estimate. Then there's the 44% who think it's perfectly fine for U.S. police departments to use drones as surveillance devices domestically. There is of course an overlap between the two segments, but when one considers that nearly half of Americans are government-dependent, and nearly half have the government uber alles mentality of content slaves, it doesn't paint a pretty picture of the condition of America and how very difficult it will be for the country to reverse course, given how far down the road of Cultural Marxist totalitarianism it has traveled. . . . . A curious presidential candidate is Jewish comedienne Roseanne Barr, running with the Peace and Freedom Party. The party's VP candidate is Cindy Sheehan, the leading activist who opposed the invasion and occupation of Iraq. Among things Barr has "tweeted," she claimed to be a victim of "Jewish mind control" and wrote, "My kids are half-Jew. I couldn't wait to breed with non-Jewish people." . . . . . A stunning 39% of young American adults consider themselves in the lower class, up from 25% in 2008, part of the "downward mobility" that is now a feature of life in the U.S. and most other "developed" countries. Even among college graduates, 17% consider themselves lower class. Overall, the middle class has shrunk from 53% to 49% since Depression 2.0 began in 2008, and the upper middle class has dropped from 19% to 15%. Only the upper class has remained stable at 2%, with many of them growing richer thanks to the systematic, ongoing plundering of the other 98% which is supported by both wings of the one-party system. . . . . And the middle and upper middle class is being attacked in other ways. One of the results of the foreclosure crisis in south Florida is the introduction into gated, upper middle class communities of ghetto black families through the auspices of the odious Section 8 housing law that has done so much harm in destroying once homogeneous White communities, but heretofore almost exclusively blue-collar ones. Now it's neighborhoods with 4,500 square-foot houses and names like "Monarch Lakes," "Isles," and "Bellagio" being attacked. Residents of Isles recently woke up to find a black single mother and her nine children living amongst them. The home associations in the neighborhoods are trying to enact bans on Section 8 housing residents, but that is of course likely to go nowhere. Actually, the best way to end multiculturalism and endless warmongering would be to enact legislation mandating that all White liberals live in majority black areas, and that the President, Vice President, and all members of Congress and their staffs spend at least six months per year on the front lines of the many wars Washington loves to engage in. . . . . A French study found that consumption of Monsanto's genetically modified corn caused rats to have massive tumors and direct organ failure. Upon reading the study, the Russian government promptly banned the importation and use of Monsanto's frankencorn within that country's borders. But in the U.S., grocery stores sell all kinds of frankencorn and other genetically modified food, usually without any kind of labeling so that consumers can avoid them. But then again, in a country with chemtrails-filled skies, public water systems with all kinds of trace supplies of dangerous drugs, and a population that has been drugged to the gills with "antidepressants" and other Brave New World types of soma beginning with "overly energetic" young boys all the way through the elderly, what else would one expect? . . . . . Government worshipping Americans can be comforted knowing that "their" government, specifically the Department of Homeland Security, is looking to purchase another 200 million rounds of bullets over the next four years (.223 rifle ammunition), as well as 176,000 rounds of .308 caliber 168 grain hollow point boat tail (HPBT) rounds in addition to 25,000 rounds of blank .308 caliber bullets, as posted on the FedBizOpps website. James Smith of the Prepper Podcast website observes that .308 rounds are generally used by well-trained snipers. . . . . A court in Jewish supremacist Israel has ruled that young American activist Rachel Corrie bore "sole responsibility" for the incident that killed her. A large Israeli army bulldozer ran over the 23-year-old Corrie in 2003, who was protesting the Israeli practice of demolishing the homes of Palestinians. Corrie's parents were in attendance as the judge fully absolved the Israeli army and criticized Rachel for putting herself in harm's way. "She chose to put herself in danger," said Judge Oded Gershon. "She stood in front of a giant bulldozer in a place where the operator could not see her. She could have easily distanced herself from danger like any reasonable person would. Her death is the result of an accident she brought upon herself." Tom Dale, a British activist who was only 30 feet away when Corrie was run over and crushed, said that it was impossible for the driver of the bulldozer not to have seen her, pointing out that she was wearing a fluorescent vest and standing on raised ground. "Whatever one thinks about the visibility from a D9 bulldozer, it is inconceivable that at some point the driver did not see her, given the distance from which he approached, while she stood, unmoving in front of it," Dale said in a statement.

"Now that civilization is worldwide the dream of a return to nature and the joys of savagery conjured up by Rosseau and Weishaupt can never be realized. Yet if civilization in a material sense cannot be destroyed, it is nonetheless possible to take the soul out of it, to reduce it to a dead and heartless machine without human feelings or divine aspirations. The Bolsheviks continue to exist amidst telephones, electric light, and other amenities of modern life, but they have almost killed the soul of Russia. In this sense then civilization may pass away, not as the civilizations of the ancient world passed away, leaving only desert sands and crumbling ruins behind them, but vanishing imperceptibly from beneath the outward structure of our existing institutions. Here is the final goal of the world revolution."

Caste Football

Caste Football is the world's only media outlet dealing with sports and race from a pro-white perspective. The party line that blacks are the best athletes is a Big Lie. Whites are discriminated against in football, basketball and other sports and are systematically demeaned by the corporate media. Caste Football covers sports and race from a unique and very much needed perspective.

Caste Football's goal is to see that white athletes are respected for their abilities, and that they receive the same opportunities to succeed as non-white athletes.

AMERICAN THIRD POSITION NEWS

The Illusion of Choice

By Dr. Adrian H. Krieg, A3P Board Member

As the organizer for ballot access for the 2012 presidential election in Florida and with the aid of Harry Bertram, American Third Position's, national Ballot Access Coordinator, I have gained some interesting insight into the workings of a so-called "democracy." Well, of course I know that the United States is a Republic, but the majority of Americans have been taught in the government schools that it's a democracy. Likewise most Americans think that they have a choice in the selection of candidates in federal elections. That is simply not the case.

Ballot access laws, some dating from after the Civil War, were primarily implemented for the purpose of maintaining the status quo of Republicrat domination of government (the two party charade). To bolster this Congress passed "The Federal Elections Campaign Act" of 1975. The law was to govern the financing of elections, by the Federal Election Commission (FEC) as an independent regulatory agency. But from 1975 to today the FEC's internal bureaucracy has been vastly expanded and it is now the agency that qualifies national political parties based on unknown criteria; making it yet another guardian of Republicrat political domination.

Due to a peculiar section of Florida law that requires FEC recognition in order for a party to attain ballot access, no political party may be listed in Florida without FEC accreditation that the party has a recognized "national committee" as arbitrarily defined by the FEC. The author is not aware of any other state that has such requirements. The fact that Florida, in violation of the First Amendment, regulates Florida political parties' finances, interaction between members, by-laws and constitutional structure as well as internal organizing structure, are just some of the hurdles placed to prevent ballot access in the Sunshine State. This is however not just a Florida issue; it's a national issue.

The fact that America's entire electoral system has only one purpose, namely the longevity and continuation of the chosen elected, is not only undeniable it is ingrained in our state and national laws. Any doubter can verify this through the fact that legislative incumbents in America enjoy a 95% re-election rate.

During the process of our Florida A3P state Chairman, Atlee Yarrow, and I trying unsuccessfully to gain Florida ballot access, we ran into the FEC in the middle of August, just two weeks before the deadline to submit our list of electors for state certification. The state officer in Tallahassee informed us that at that time we were listed but not qualified by the FEC, and that until we were qualified by them would not be granted ballot access in Florida.

This led to two letters to the FEC in Washington, one general letter from the party's National Chairman, William D. Johnson Esq., on the 10th of August requesting expedited qualification, and a letter from me dated August 13th to the director of the FEC, Caroline Hunter. Neither letter was responded to. Why? Fortunately for us a young attorney at the FEC took up the issue and provided us such information as was available to him.

Out of these issues I have reached the conclusion that the FEC does not at this time have a written procedure for determining the qualification requirements for political party accreditation by them. Well, the agency has had only 37 years to produce such a list, so maybe I shouldn't be so hard on them. In actual fact this is very convenient because it allows the arbitrary refusal of certification based in unwritten law or even an outline of requirements.

Fortunately we were able to obtain a series of correspondences between other political parties and the FEC and with the help of an FEC lawyer were able to draw up the requirements for national party qualification. The only redeeming matter in this entire scenario has been the cooperation of one FEC lawyer, Tony Buckley.

We were startled to determine that A3P in fact qualified on every single issue, and that the FEC board did not vote on our qualification or even review our applications. Lord knows, they could have gone to our website www.american3rdposition.com and gained all the necessary information for qualification. Alas, being as busy as they are they simply did not find time to do their jobs.

This it appears to us is another useless agency of government that along with Education, Energy, Labor, HHS, Housing and Urban Development and others should be disbanded.

"Uncle Joe" yes, that's what the Grey Lady (The New York Times) called the greatest mass murderer of world history, Josef Stalin, who said on this topic: "I don't care who votes, or who they vote for, I only care about who counts the votes."

JOIN AMERICAN THIRD POSITION!

Building a "third" party to challenge the two long-entrenched, corrupt monopoly parties is a daunting task — but one which must be attempted, otherwise we are ceding the country we love to the Big Government/Corporate/Bankster/Zionist/Military/Entertainment Complex that is plundering America with no accountability or opposition.

A3P needs your support. If you believe that it's time to challenge the two-party tyranny, then please join A3P today.

As the War Drums Beat

By Merlin Miller, A3P presidential candidate

I contemplate my recent trip to the Islamic Republic of Iran and ask myself who wants war between America and Iran. I quickly surmise that it is not the American people, nor the Iranian people, but globalists (international bankers and their multinational beneficiaries). They control Israel, the American media and most of our politicians…and by extension our foreign policy.

My journey to this exotic and little understood land began with an invitation to "New Horizon – The First International Independent Filmmakers Festival." It was a conference and festival held in Tehran from September 2nd through September 7th. Filmmakers and intellectuals from around the world attended. It was one of the most stimulating experiences that I have ever had and an effective bridge between diverse cultures and perspectives — with the purpose of promoting truth, justice, liberty, and peace.

This initiative was undertaken, not by America or other world leaders, but by a country unfairly besieged with sanctions and threats of war. My observations were in stark contrast to the perceptions of most Americans. What I experienced was a devout country with a love of God, family, and nation — and an uncompromising respect for the noblest of human endeavors.

As I write this, a giant, beautiful book, Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam, lies next to me. Khayyam's wonderful poems have survived the test of time and are a testament to the normally peaceful spirit of the Persian people. This treasure was given to me by President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad. Inside its back cover, he inscribed the following for me (transcribed from Farsi):

In the name of God who loves human beings.

My dear brother:

I, you, we and all of us are pursuing truth and happiness for human beings, which is unfortunately a victim of world powers.

This is a historical opportunity to undermine all inhuman relations and put an end to prejudices, which have questioned the truths and separates them, to build a new beautiful world based on love, justice and beauty.

This is a historical and certainly achievable objective. It only needs our hands, minds and hearts to join each other.

I pray Great God to bless you, who love humanity and wish success for all. I hope to meet you in a better future.

September 8, 2012

I found President Ahmadinejad to be a humble man with a firm handshake and intense, intelligent eyes. Despite his courteous and dignified bearing, he has been regularly berated, and routinely misrepresented, by a controlled Western media. Is their demonization justified, or has he been targeted as the lone political figure standing against Zionist powers? This is my attempt to represent truths, such that the world might have a better understanding of Iran, its people, and its leadership.

The Iranian people are similar to Europeans in appearance…a beautiful people, poised and kind. Their women wear clothing which modestly covers them, but in elegant fashion and with serene faces that are usually exposed. They return smiles and are not treated as second class citizens, as we have been conditioned to believe. In fact, they outnumber men in higher education enrollments. There is no profanity and women are safe on any Tehran street — at any time of day or night. The influences of Western civilization have not been totally removed, but the Iranians resist the decadence of Cultural Marxism. I attribute this largely to their faith and love of family. I was surprised to discover that the Islamic faith actually honors Jesus and Christianity. However, through Zionist media control, policy dictates, and other manipulations, the Christian world is incessantly convinced that Muslims should be our enemies and that we should be theirs.

Muslims look with jaundiced eye upon the outrageous media lies and perpetual assaults on their faith and culture. Hollywood's promotion of twisted films can provoke extremist reactions, and we are then led to believe that all Muslims are radicals. We never question the bizarre promotion of these divisive, Zionist inspired productions, or the actions of multinational interests in the internal affairs of sovereign Islamic nations. Were we to look honestly at the many false portrayals, we would see remarkable similarities to how our Christian communities have also been assaulted — increasingly with contempt and disrespect by these same Zionist and Cultural Marxist propagandists. They seek a globalist new world order — devoid of the diversity and freedoms associated with independent nation states.

As I wandered from the festival grounds to meet people on the streets, I found them to be most helpful and without animosity – despite my obvious American nationality. I enjoyed their exotic food and came to appreciate the craftsmanship of their products. The only negative sensation that I had was in witnessing the madhouse traffic situation in Tehran. A city of 15 million, it has grown faster that its infrastructure. Despite this, the city is thriving with new construction and beautiful parks and monuments — which reflect a noble and accomplished people. The Iranians seemingly love Americans, but are rightly concerned and critical of our irrational and invasive government policies. The common response seems to be "why would your country want to attack us?"

The current condemnation of Iran is supposedly due to the possibility that they may develop nuclear weapons. We should all work for a world free from nuclear threat, but the sovereignty of nations must also be respected. Iran is a signatory to the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty and has opened their facilities for inspection, declaring their interest is for energy development only. No evidence to the contrary has been shown, and Iran's Supreme Leader, the Ayatollah Khamenei, condemns nuclear weaponry — actually declaring a "Fatwa" against them — as it is contrary to their nation's faith.

Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad greets Merlin Miller

However, Israel, their chief accuser (and architect behind the campaign to falsely accuse Iraq of possessing "weapons of mass destruction"), is believed to possess over 300 nuclear weapons. Israel is not a signatory to the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty and has no intention of sharing information or opening their facilities for inspection — yet America continues to march to their fanatical war drums against others. Why is there no pressure on Israel to meet the same standards and why are we imposing "sanctions" against a nation that has done us no wrong? It is a preliminary act of war, and only imposed because Israeli lobbies demand it of our lap-dog politicians, who incredibly serve Zionist interests rather than the American people.

Iran is a strategic rival for regional hegemony in the resource rich Middle East and has stood strong for Islamic unity. They also courageously and most justifiably call for an end to the Palestinian occupation — the ruthless suppression of an enslaved people, largely funded by America. There is no greater injustice than that being perpetrated against the Palestinian people. World condemnation, through the United Nations, is consistently blocked by U.S. actions on the Security Council. As a result, the Non Aligned Nations Movement (NAM) is growing as an alternative to the UN. Its recent success is not generally reported in Western media, but 120 nations came together in Tehran the week before the New Horizon Film Festival — in unity and in opposition to the evils of the Israeli occupation of Palestine. The Secretary General of the United Nations even attended, as well as observers from Russia and China. The Palestinian occupation and Israeli aggressions (including "false flag" operations against other nations) are at the root of the discontents for Zionism.

As President Ahmadinejad gave me a copy of Khayyam's works, I gave him copy of my Western motion picture, "Jericho," and my political book, "Our Vision for America." When I asked him what messages I might convey to the American people, he indicated "truths" and "Iran's desire for peace." Through lies and evil acts, Globalists and Zionists falsely portray Iran, as they seek conflict between nations. I later told him that our State Department should be meeting with Iran's leaders and not depending on the initiatives of private citizens, like me. However, I hope that he and the Iranian people take hope in the prospect that many patriotic Americans are awakening to the evils that have consumed us, even while our politicians continue to betray the otherwise good spirit and traditions of the American people. Growing numbers seek answers that might save America and truly promote world peace.

Americans do not want war, and are beginning to realize that our politicians, of both major parties, initiate these actions against the wishes of the American people — and in accord with the intrigues of international bankers and their Zionist agents. It is time we stopped them by creating alternatives in politics, and in media. Iran sees the need and is taking appropriate initiatives, and so should America.

I went to Iran to promote the prospects for producing "False Flag," a critically important motion picture. I returned to America more committed than ever to produce this political thriller and, through commercial entertainment, help awaken a sleeping America. Vital truths must be revealed so that new evils are not perpetrated against the people of America and Iran, with destructive effects resonating throughout the world. I also return committed to building a viable third party, which will represent traditional working class Americans, rather than perpetuating a corrupt two party system, which serves special global interests. God willing, my answer to the courageous efforts of President Ahmadinejad is "I also hope to meet you in a better future."

Merlin Miller Interviewed

By The Nationalist Times Staff

American Third Position presidential candidate Merlin Miller has done many newspaper, radio and television interviews since his nomination in January of 2012. Some have been conducted by hostile interviewers but many have been on alternative media outlets which have been fair in almost all cases.

This short interview, by Dan Poole of the Detroit Examiner, is a representative objective interview of Miller, who is a well-versed and articulate speaker, far better than Barack "Where's My Teleprompter" Obama and Mitt "Where Are My Cue Cards" Romney."

Merlin Miller

Q. What would you say to the Southern Poverty Law Center and anyone else who describes your party, the American Third Position, as a racist hate group?

A. The SPLC, ADL and other Marxist organizations have an elitist/new world order agenda and work diligently to destroy their competition. This includes denying truths which might otherwise protect Western Civilization.

Due to the power of their constituencies, these groups control the public discourse through media ownership, political activism, and business/banking affiliations. They are able to effectively, and falsely, label their adversaries.

Groups such as the A3P, are prevented from accurately identifying themselves and their positions, which are simply protective of traditional American interests.

It is not racist to want to preserve America's constitutional republic or its founding stock, which built this nation and made it great. To do otherwise is treasonous to traditional American citizens.

It is not racist to try to prevent the dispossession of the White race or the unfair, unconstitutional application of "affirmative action" laws. The SPLC and ADL clearly advocate racist policies for Jewish/Israeli interests, while hypocritically promoting multiculturalism and multiracism for all others.

Q. It seems like immigration is the defining issue of both your campaign and A3P. What, exactly, would you do about the darkening of America?

A. In protecting America's natural citizens, a moratorium on immigration should be imposed until responsible legislation can be implemented. Immigration should be restricted, especially in difficult economic times, to only satisfy our nation's true needs — and should not radically alter the existing racial/ethnic demographics.

Illegal immigration should not be tolerated, let alone rewarded with government benefit programs. Those who break our laws should be treated as criminals.

America was 90% European derived as late as the mid-1960's. That overwhelming majority is now predicted to become a minority within the next 30 years. This is a radical demographic assault that will destroy America, if not stopped. We are already suffering serious economic and cultural effects.

Q. Right now the two party system is locked in tight. What do you think it's going to take for a third party like A3P to replace the Republicans as the challenger to the Democrats?

A. It will probably require a complete economic collapse (which is coming) to wake up enough Americans to realize that neither major political party represents their best interests – but are controlled by special globalist interests.

The Republican Party has effectively, but only temporarily, hijacked the budding "tea party" movement. But a third party's viability will grow as America's decline becomes more apparent and our middle-class seeks true representation. To succeed, the A3P must work for election reform and secure sufficient funding to educate our citizens with truths.

Q. Here in Detroit and Southeast Michigan, the auto industry has fallen apart and manufacturing jobs have been lost. What is your solution to this problem?

A. This is a multi-faceted problem, but the solution is to stop the treasonous behavior of our politicians and put America first. This will require creating incentives for entrepreneurs/small businesses and erecting barriers to unfair competition, including protective tariffs.

Most importantly, we must replace "free trade agreements" with "fair trade agreements," which will benefit the American worker, rather than multinational corporations and foreign nations.
